

Darrel Delaronde and Saskia

We think that our music comes from the heart. We are songwriters, we share ideas, choruses, and thesauruses (hey, that rhymes!) With an open mind comes a melody or phrase that rattles around in the brain, chasing out all other thoughts like mortgage payments or home owner's grants, until one writes out of sheer desperation.

We have found, (after years of trying to convince ourselves we were chefs or loggers or something) that our purpose in life is to play music and sing. Nothing else ever worked out for us, yet when we get on a stage something clicks into place and we're in sync with the universe. By truly living and working in an artistic way we find, like so many other artists before us, that our goals have also changed. We work in music because it is our calling and our dream. We know today that it is the journey, not the destination that matters.

On our 2007-08 tour we will be promoting our newest album "Laura's Kitchen".

All the material in this collection is written from and of the heart. We have included songs of love, spirituality and recovery; alongside stories that are historical adventures and outright "tall tales". We have named our adventure "The Porchlight Tour" after one of the prominent songs on the recording.

The main theme of this song is about leaving the porch light on for when our children need to find their way back home. "Porchlight" advocates a return to old time family values, which we feel is the answer to many of society's problems.

In finding ourselves and our dreams, we look at life with a full and thankful heart, and in gratitude seek a chance to give back some of the abundance we have received. In that light we are offering partial proceeds of all our concert ticket sales to local food banks as we pass through the towns and cities we play, for as anyone will agree;

"It starts with the family, and hunger discriminates against no one."

*In love and gratitude,
